"It is with great joy that I have been involved in the COLDA program for several years at the Nairobi conference. I supported this initiative. I have had the great honor of dealing with various aspects of viral hepatitis B in Sub-Saharan Africa, and in particular, the prevention of mother-to-child transmission. Our discussions at COLDA will certainly help do great things in the fight against viral hepatitis, and therefore, hepatocellular carcinoma. We can thus hope to achieve the goal of eliminating viral hepatitis. It is a pleasure to work with the entire COLDA technical team."

Ashraf Omar, MD

Cairo University,
Egypt

Hepatocellular Carcinoma (HCC) is one of the major health problems in some regions of Africa. There is always a challenge for the early diagnosis or better survival results.

Recently, the landscape of systemic treatment for advanced cases has been changed with much better survival results. A great opportunity during the upcoming COLDA meeting for discussing the new and future systemic treatment of HCC with different relevant specialties in a multidisciplinary approach... please keep tuned."
